PRINTER'S PRAYER

O the great printer who prints in all the colors of the rambow, and whose type faces ake stars and clouds, autumn leaves and sunbeams, snowflakes and flowers, this is my prayer...That I may set up my life to the measure of a man; that i may have the courage, win or lose, to follow the rules of the game; that I may point my life towards the things that count; that 1 may lock up within my heart idle tales, gossip, and words that hukt; that I may make ready for the opportunities to serve that come my way; that 1 may register in my memory the splendor of sunsets, the glow of friendships, the thrill of great music, and the mental lift of inspiring thoughts; that i may press forward in the spirit of adventure towards new horizons of achievement; that i may work and turn out worthy accomplishments; that the impressions i make on the white pages of time may encourage, theek, and inspike all those who cross my path; that i may bind together in my own life all those positive qualities that make for happy, creative, triumphant living; and finally, o master of printers, help me to avoid the disgrace of making pi of my life and guide me safely around the yawning mouth of the hell box.

TRIBUTE TO ERIC K. SVENDSEN AND RUSS ALEXANDER

We extend sincere condolences to the families and friends of departed members of the Union.

Due to the amount of space allotted in this program, the Union has selected only two outstanding Union men who are now deceased and until 1974, devoted a large portion of their lives towards making this great Union better for all members and their families.

To have known Eric Svendsen and Russ Alexander was our privilege and pleasure, and we are sure that all members of Columbia Typographical Union will share these views, especially those who have served the Union along with them on the various committees, elected or appointed offices, that they so diligently served and gave of themselves.

Although Eric was small in physical stature, his capabilities and overwhelming desire to keep this Union strong, intact and always alert to the dangers facing our Union in these trying times, made him a giant in the eyes of his peers and his friends in Columbia Typographical Union No. 101.

Russ was best known for his many years of service to the Typographical Federal Credit Union, although he served in many other capacities and was Sergeant-at-Arms of Columbia 101 at the time of his death.

THE WASHINGTON UNION PRINTERS ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

The Washington Union Printers Athletic Association has been a member of the Union Printers International Baseball League since its formation in 1908. Except for World Wars I and II, the League has operated continuously. The local association and the League are funded entirely outside the ITU by various means. The League is comprised of 10 cities: Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, New York, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, St. Paul, and Washington. Each city is franchised to a commissioner whose responsibility it is to organize, maintain, and field a team in an annual tournament held in a different city each year.

For many years Washington fielded strong teams both locally and in the tournaments. Many will remember the good reputation of the Union Printers competing in such leagues as the Departmental League, the Vic Gauzza League, the Industrial League, and most recently, the Maryland Industrial League. Some very famous local sandlotters were members of our teams. Through the years the Union Printers were a team to be reckoned with and they collected a number of championships. In 27 out of 60 tournaments, Washington captured the UPIBL championship. A record which is not likely to be equalled in the foreseeable future of the UPIBL.

With such an illustrious heritage to uphold, today we are at the crossroads. No longer do we have the strong teams. We have been unable, lately, to attract the quality ballplayers needed to stay competitive.

Perhaps our past successes have served to dissuade young ballplayers from trying out with us. If so, we would like to dispel the notion right now and invite all prospective players to come out and try for the team. All positions are wide open and you will be afforded every opportunity to make the team. There are no restrictions other than those of eligibility which are listed below:

- 1. Journeymen and apprentice printer and mailer members of the ITU.
- 2. Sons of printer and mailer members of the ITU.
- 3. Grandsons of printer and mailer members of the ITU.
- 4. Members (2) of the Allied Trades as defined by the Allied Trades Council.

In all of the Columbia Typographical Union and Mailers #29 there must be many prospective players, the trick, of course, is to get them to contact us and come on out. So we would like to ask each of you members to do a little scouting and see if you can refer a youngster to us for a tryout. Please contact either George Mosedale on WA. 7-2061 or Clem Barbaza on 443-6740 or 869-3506. Your efforts will be greatly appreciated and every lead checked out. Remember, with your help we can build for a solid future.

We would also like to take this opportunity to invite any of you to become active in the association. We need help and new ideas for fund-raising and management. With prices what they are today, the race to keep up is a losing proposition that will eventually overcome us if we do not enlist every available resource.

Congratulations on your 160th Anniversary

BEST WISHES FOR CONTINUED SUCCESS TO COLUMBIA TYPO UNION NO. 101, AMERICA'S OLDEST LABOR UNION, ON ITS 160th ANNIVERSARY

160 Years as a Maker of American Labor History

By JESSE B. MANBECK, Vice President

This 1975 anniversary will mark the 160th year of the continuous existence of America's oldest labor union-Columbia Typographical Union No. 101 (AFL-CIO).

Alex Grahami was the first President and William Duncan was the original Vice President of Columbia Typographical Society, as this labor union was first named. Both were elected at the January 7, 1815, organization meeting.

While January 7, 1815, has been celebrated as the birthday of our union, the first organization meeting was held on December 10, 1814, when 30 printers met at the home of H. C. Leurs.

On December 17, 1814, the members of this new American labor union met in the offices of John H. Wade, Ninth and Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., and adopted the Union's Constitution, which is still the keystone of this labor organization.

The original eligibility requirements to be accepted as a union member were (1) that the applicant must be a resident of the District of Columbia; (2) must pay union dues of 25 cents per month; (3) must pay 25 cents for a copy of the Constitution and Bylaws; (4) and must have served at least a 2-year apprenticeship. Pressmen as well as printers were accepted as members.

Members with 3 or more months of membership were eligible to receive a sick benefit of $3.00 per week.

The wage scale in 1815 was eleven (11) cents per hour for a 12-hour shift or $9.00 per week. When Congress was in session it added $1.00 per week, and if you worked on a Sunday, $2.00 more per week was added.

In October 1818, the members of Columbia Typographical Society initiated an "unfair list" covering craftsmen who worked for less than the union wage scale.

In the American Independence Day celebration parade held on July 5, 1824, some members of Columbia Typographical Society manned a Ramage Printing Press mounted on a parade float, and printed and distributed copies of the "Declaration of Independence" along the line of the parade and this innovation made a big impression on the D. C. population.

Our Union reached a total of 68 members in 1827, and seven years later had 183 members.

In 1834, the members of this D. C. labor union launched a campaign for a D. C. General Trades Union-the forerunner of the present D. C. Central Labor Council.

Also in 1834, the publisher of the U. S. Telegraph, a Washington daily newspaper, announced his paper planned to replace his journeymen printers and pressmen with children and other non-union employees. Our Union then voted a "boycott" against the Telegraph and continued it for three years, until its ownership changed.

On May 3, 1838, our Union voted to place and erect its own headquarters building. This later turned out to be "Typographical Temple" at 423 G Street, N. W.

This building later gave office space to the newly launched American Federation of Labor, which replaced the "Knights of Labor" organization.

In 1840, a Mr. J. D. Hill of Virginia offered Columbia Typographical Society his patents for a type-setting machine, but the Union declined the offer.

In 1846, our Union adopted a very critical resolution condemning the sub-contracting of Government printing as "political sports," and began a campaign to have the Federal Government do its own printing. This campaign eventuated in the establishment of the GPO in 1865.

The Washington Monument remained uncompleted for many years, so a campaign seeking public subscriptions for the funds to complete it was launched.

In November 1849, the members of Columbia Typographical Society made a contribution of $1,000.00 as our Union's subscription to this fund.

This $1,000.00 contributed purchased one stone in the Washington Monument and today—half way up the Monument—you can see this stone, which bears this inscription:

"PRESENTED BY THE COLUMBIA TYPOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY (INSTITUTED JANUARY 1815) AS A MEMENTO OF THEIR VENERATION FOR THE FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY."

In 1850 there were 157 members enrolled in our union.

After several unsuccessful efforts to get a National printing union started, this objective was finally accomplished in 1852, when the National Typographical Union was launched by representatives of 14 cities meeting in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The unions represented drew for their local union members as follows:

- 1. Indianapolis, Indiana
- 2. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
- 3. Cincinnati, Ohio
- 4. Albany, New York
- 5. Columbus, Ohio
- 6. New York, New York
- 7. Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania
- 8. St. Louis, Missouri
- 9. Buffalo, New York
- 10. Louisville, Kentucky
- 11. Memphis, Tennessee
- 12. Baltimore, Maryland*
- 13. Boston, Massachusetts
- 14. Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

*Baltimore protested its No. 12, claiming continuous existence since 1831.

In 1854, our union inaugurated what is now called "Daylight Savings" by adopting a motion at a union meeting that hereafter hours of work shall be from 8:00 A.M. to 7:00 P.M. from October to March, and from 7:00 A.M. to 6:00 P.M. from April to September each year.

In 1863 the printers' scale of wages was raised from $16.00 per week to $18.00 per week, and in 1864 another wage increased weekly wages from $18.00 to $20.00.

On Saturday, April 13, 1865, our Union adopted the following resolution: "THAT AS A MARK OF RESPECT WE FEEL FOR THE LAMENTED DECEASED (PRESIDENT ABRAHAM LINCOLN), THE TYPOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY WILL ATTEND THE FUNERAL IN A BODY, AND WEAR THE USUAL BADGE OF MOURNING FOR 30 DAYS."

In 1866 the printers' wages went to $24.00 per week. The U. S. Comptroller ruled that GPO printers' hours of work be the same as in private industry.

On February 2, 1867, John H. Oberly, President of the National Typographical Union, formally invited Columbia Typographical Society to become a subordinate branch of this national union. By a vote of 70 to 9 at the May 1867 Union meeting, this invitation was accepted, and our Union was assigned "No. 101" as a local union.

On June 1, 1867, George A. R. McNair, then President of Columbia Typographical Society, accepted its charter from a representative of the National Typographical Union.

On October 19, 1866, the U. S. Comptroller (now GAO) ruled that GPO printers had to take a reduction in wages from $4.00 to $3.20 per day. The printers immediately went on strike and stayed out three days until the GPO Superintendent of Printing, C. Wendell, wrote a letter to No. 101 agreeing to restore the cut in wages.

In 1869, there were 525 members of No. 101. The name of "International" replaced "National" with the admission the Canadian unions.

In September 1870, No. 101 admitted its first woman member, while in 1871 the GPO printers collected $500.00 for the sufferers in the Chicago fire.

In 1876, a campaign was launched to separate the GPO printers from those in D. C. private industry, but the motion was "overwhelmingly defeated."

In October 1883, there was a work stoppage at the Washington Post, and it took over a year to get union printers back on the paper.

In 1885, George W. Childs, publisher of the Public Ledger in Philadelphia, was made an "honorary member" of No. 101 for his voluntary action of paying the printers on his paper more than $5,000.00 per year.

In 1886, the price at which newspapers were sold in Washington, D. C. became the subject of an arbitration, which was won by the printers' union.

In 1891 ground was broken at 423 G Street, N. W. for "Typographical Temple," with funds supplied by American Security and Trust Co., and the completed building was dedicated on May 2, 1891, by U. S. President William Harrison. William E. Shields was No. 101 President.

(The brownstone brick in this building came from Hummelstown, Pa., where Vice President Manbeck was born. This town is also named after Manbeck's ancestors.)

In 1892 the Linotype came into D. C. newspapers.

In 1894, D. C. union printers launched the "Washington Times" daily newspaper. The Washington Post purchased the Times Herald in 1953 for $8,000,000.00
